

Rachel Camerini received her Ph.D. in Chemical Sciences - Science for the Conservation of Cultural Heritage at the University of Florence in 2019 and now holds a postdoctoral fellowship for the development of nanomaterials and soft matter for conservation purposes. Her work mainly focuses on the synthesis and characterization of nanoparticles for stone consolidation and gels for the cleaning of water-sensitive artifacts.