

Antonella Barone is a PhD student of the University Magna Graecia of Catanzaro, Italy. She graduated in Pharmacy with a master thesis concerning drug delivery systems for anticancer treatment. She carries out research in the field of drug delivery, in particular conventional lipid nanovesicles such as liposomes and lipid vesicles for topical application. Recently she focused her research on extracellular vesicles for the delivery of natural and chemotherapeutic compounds. Currently, she is a visiting research scholar at Karolinska Institutet, where She is deeping pre- and post- engeneerization methods of EVs.