

Within Research and Industrial Development department of Italiana Petroli (api group), from 2021 his current activity is focused on green hydrogen business development, energy markets, special energy transition projects.

After graduating in Civil Engineering at Sapienza in the academic year 2000-01, he spent his first seven years of job experience in the engineering & construction of maritime sector, leading both national and international harbour projects; then followed two years of experience as infrastructure manager in one of the leading wind turbine manufactures, and afterwards he has started a significant experience in api group covering several roles in its energy sector (project manager for construction renewable power plants, operation manager of power plants, responsible for power sales and power trading & power dispatching – in this last role from 2014 to 2018 he gave his contribution to the start-up of api nòva energia as new operator in the power markets); from 2018 until 2020 he has led the 4,600 IP petrol station network O&M team during the merger period between IP and Totalerg, leading at the same time the 2,300 Totalerg petrol stations rebranding project; before joining R&ID, he has spent one year as supply manager in the supply, feedstock and shipping department of Italiana Petroli.