

Sebastiano Sciarretta is Full Professor of Cardiology in the Department of Medical and Surgical Sciences and Biotechnologies, Sapienza University of Rome. He is a physician scientist and his career has always been devoted to the study of the molecular mechanisms underlying cardiovascular diseases, by conducting basic and translational studies. He is a recognized expert in signaling transduction mechanisms and autophagy. He has participated to working groups and research consortia, including a Leducq Network. He is Fellow of the AHA and member of ESC. He is also member of editorial boards of prestigious journals and received multiple awards and research funding.